CHAUNCEY C. BRYANT

Chauncey C. Bryant, a resident of Bethel since boyhood, passed away at his home on Mechanic Street late Thursday night after a long illness.

Mr. Bryant was born in Woodstock, Aug. 20, 1852. He married Miss Ella Smith of Bethel, who died four years ago. For many years he conducted a meat and grocery business, continuing the meat business established by the late W. W. Mason, from whom he learned that trade. Over 30 years ago he sold the business to his son which is now conducted by his grandson.

He was the oldest member of both Mount Abram Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Bethel Lodge, F. and A. M. Surviving are his son, William C. Bryant; a grandson, Myron C. Bryant; a brother, Loring Bryant of Portland; two great-grandchildren, Richard and Carolyn Bryant of Bethel; and a niece, Mrs. Frank Allen of Portland.

Funeral services were held at Greenleaf's funeral rooms Sunday afternoon, Rev. P. J. Clifford officiating. Interment was in Woodland cemetery.

MRS. CLARA L. BURGESS

Mrs. Clara Lewis Burgess died Friday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Powers, at Newry, after suffering for some time from heart trouble as a result of a recent illness caused by pneumonia.

She was born at Harrison 80 years ago, the daughter of Edward and Nancy Sylvester Lewis. She married Clarence Burgess of Naples, who died 15 years ago. Six children were born to them, five of whom survive: Mrs. Arminia Luxton, Bethel; Howard Burgess, Berlin, N. H.; Mrs. Ada Grover, Norway; Herbert Burgess, Bethel; Mrs. Cora Powers, Newry. She also leaves three brothers, Warren Lewis, Newton, Mass.; Austin Lewis, Harrison; Jesse Lewis, Bridgton; 12 grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, Rev. P. J. Clifford officiating.

NEXT WEEK'S LEAGUE TILTS

On Saturday, July 14, Mechanic Falls comes to Bethel for an important league contest. If Bethel can win over the Mechanic Falls team it will put them in a triple tie for first place. Mechanic Falls has only one defeat against them, by West Paris, while they have beaten Bethel once by a 3-0 score at Mechanic Falls.

Batteries for Mechanic Falls will be either Quinn or Hebert and Spaulding while Bethel's battery will be Whitman and Swan. The game is scheduled to start at 5 p. m., and a real game is assured to all team followers.

On Wednesday, July 18, Bethel journeys to Norway where they will endeavor to take the scalps of the Norway Blue Sox.

MAINE CAMPS ARE VALUED AT OVER $25,000,000

The Boys and Girls camp property in Maine is valued at over $25,000,000 says the Maine Development Commission. There are 133 of these camps in the State. To them come each year 13,000 boys and girls from almost every state in the Union. These camps employ 3,000 counselors and pay them annually $442,000 in wages. The other help such as cooks, caretakers, guides, etc. total 2,100 and receive $510,000 in wages. These camp owners pay taxes to the towns of Maine, on an assessment of over $7,000,000. They buy from the Maine Farmer $499,000 worth of farm produce.

The boys and girls camps in Maine are of unusually high grade. Some of the finest to be found in the country are located here. The Camp Directors' compliance very highly the work of the State Health Department. They say that the Regulations and Standards maintained by the Maine Health Department is much higher than in other states. Because of these high standards, the ideal locations, the fine climate and the absence of poisonous snakes and insects, Maine is a summer paradise for boys and girls. Due to these facts the possibilities for future development is great.

These camps will have a larger enrollment this year than for the past three years. It will exceed last year by 15 to 20 per cent.

OXFORD COUNTY WOMAN TO BROADCAST

RUMFORD DOLLAR DAYS COMING NEXT WEEK

The Rumford Chamber of Commerce is making plans for the biggest Dollar Day events ever held in Rumford. The dates are Friday and Saturday of next week, July 20 and 21. A novel feature of their plan is a free bus trip from Bethel to Rumford and return on both days. The hours will be announced next week.

GOOD SHOES AID HEALTH SPECIALIST ADVISES

No other article of feminine wear combines in so great a degree the problems of health, fashion, economy, and comfort, believes Helen Spaulding, clothing specialist for the Extension Service.

"The shoe one wears," she says, "has a lot to do with posture and posture makes a lot of difference with fatigue at the end of the day. Working backward, the least fatigue is felt by the person who has good body mechanics. That person expends less energy in a given task because the minimum effort is being made by the body to maintain its balance. Good body mechanics depend a lot on normal action of the foot. Normal action of the foot depends upon its being shod in a shoe which won't hamper it."

"An investigation conducted some years ago with a large number of women demonstrated that when the heel was elevated more than an inch and a half body balance was destroyed. The weight of the body is thrown upon the metatarsal arch instead of being carried by the normal distribution over three strong arches springing between the heel, the base of the great toe and the base of the little toe. This tends to distort the foot and causes strain in compensating for lack of balance."

"There should be room in a shoe, too, so that the toes may spread to gain proper leverage as the weight of the body is shifted from one foot to another in walking."

Marilyn Abbott of West Bethel is spending a week with Mrs. Laurence Lord.

A black and white photograph of a two-story house with a porch, identified as the home of the late Mrs. J. W. Smith. The house has a gabled roof with a chimney on the left side. The porch is covered and supported by columns. The house is surrounded by a lawn and some trees in the background.

INTEREST INCREASES IN TWO YEAR AGRICULTURAL COURSE

The highest prospective enrollment of two year agricultural students in ten years is forecast for the coming school year at the University of Maine, according to Arthur L. Deering, Dean of the College of Agriculture.

Names of 122 Maine boys have been submitted to Dean Deering by high school principals of the state whom they believe to be interested in the shorter course. "I am sending names of these boys," one principal writes, "because I think they are the type you want. They probably lack some of the necessary entrance units but you will find they are clean, honest, and hard working boys."

Another writes, "although this boy is very able, a four year college education is out of the question for him due to a lack of money."

This two year course, Dean Deering points out, is designed for the boy who lacks the necessary high school preparation or sufficient money to pursue the four year course. He states emphatically that every boy interested in agriculture should make an effort to take the longer and more complete course, if it is possible. The two year course, he says, will fill a real need, however, for those who expect to farm for themselves.

With the recent appointment of Fred P. Loring, Presque Isle, to be in charge of the two year course, it is expected that an increasing number of boys will take advantage of the opportunity.

Circulars describing the two year course are now being mailed by Dean Deering to those students in the state who request information.

WE MIGHT BE HONEST WITH OUR YOUTH
(Quincy Evening News)

The commencement speaker is abroad in the land again these days, and if his task is a little easier this year than it has been for some time, it is still the kind of a job that might make a strong man quail.

In the old days it was fairly simple. The speaker had only to get up and begin telling the youngsters about the innumerable opportunities that were ahead of them, and how hard work and honesty would bring their inevitable reward.

Then, when he saw the younger members of the class getting restless, he could shut off and sit down, contented.

But of late years it has been different.

Opportunities for young graduates have been anything but innumerable during the last three or four years. There are plenty of young men in America today who got three diplomas four years ago who haven't been able to get jobs since then—although many of them needed jobs very badly, since their fathers were out of work.

Now have hard work and honesty carried their usual premiums. It's all very well to talk about them, but when a depression forces your employer out of business and your job dissolves beneath you, you're left holding the sack just as if you had been a time-server and a coun-tiner.

Of course, things are better now.
There is reason to hope that they will be even better a year from now. But the commencement speaker is still on the spot.

Perhaps his best course would simply be to go honest and say something like this:

"I have a lot of crust, addressing you youngsters, because you can't help seeing that my generation just doesn't know how to run the country decently.

"Some of you will find jobs, if you're lucky, the rest of you will sit around the house and wonder what it's all about. I don't mind telling you that I've been wondering the same thing for several years.

"While you're wondering, you might stop to think that this country is able to raise up much food that completely could have all he wants to eat. It's able to make enough clothing for everybody, enough shoes, enough vacuum cleaners, enough automobiles, enough houses, enough of everything you can think of.

"There isn't really much excuse for us to have unemployment and poverty and want, except our own stupidity.

"If you youngsters can figure out a way to get the wheels turning full speed, the country will be very grateful to you. If it doesn't put you in jail. At any rate, I wish you lots of luck."

CANNING CENTERS TO BE SUBJECT OF BROADCAST

Miss Leone Dabin, Home Demonstration Agent of Aroostook County, will tell the people of Maine about organizing and working with canning centers in the northern part of the state. Listen in over station WCHL, Portland, Monday noon at 1 p. m., D. S. T., and hear Miss Dabin.

WORK

"I must do the work of my Father while it is yet day; for the night cometh when no man can work."
The difference between the Old Testament idea of labor and that of the New Testament is as great as in the thought of God the Fearful and The Heavenly Father.

In the Old Testament we read the curse—"In the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread." In the New Testament—"I must do the work of My Father"—"My Father worketh hitherto and I work"—"We are workers together with God."

We slug—"My master, was a worker" and we think of God himself as working. Labor is not a curse but a blessing—and we would pray—"Give us this day our daily task—labor."

Work is a blessing not a curse—and we do not ask charity but a job.
"Present good, future good, no good—these possibilities are mighty in the crude ore which we ordinarily call work. Out of that we must smelt—if we can—the pure metal of a vocation fit for the spirit of man. The crude mass of 'work' as it exists today, in the mills, stores, farms, schoolrooms, and kitchens contains elements which should be abolished, elements that are hard, but no more than we need to call out the best in us, and here and there a nugget of pure delight."

There is a value to drudgery, so-called—for says Martineau
"Power to drudge at distasteful tasks is the test of faculty, the price of knowledge, and the matter of duty."

Drudgery ceases to be such when it is performed with a desire for the goal of attainment—a sense of worthwhileness.

To feel that one is necessary in the home or community is a blessing. To feel that no one would be poorer if we had never lived or cadder if we ceased to live is sorrow indeed.

Work may be—perhaps is—acquired taste, but it is a worthwhile acquisition. It gives one a place on the team, a dignity of achievement and a share in the victory—the world progress and joy.

A visitor to a quarry asked three different workers the same question—"What are you doing?"
"Cutting stone," said the first.
"Earning six dollars a day," said the second.

The third with smiling lips and shining eyes turned from the rough stone for a moment—"I am building a cathedral!"

All are architects of fate
Building in the halls of time
Some with massive work and great
Some with ornaments of rhyme.

What are you doing working, earning a living, building a cathedral?

Yes—Building a character.
Workers together with God building an eternity.

EIGHTH INNING LUCKY ONE FOR BETHEL

Bethel tripped Norway Saturday night in the eighth inning. The tune of 8-5, by a big eight in the eighth inning. Norway scored two runs in the second inning on Moren's fluke home run. Wing had been hit by the pitcher. In the sixth, Coffin connected with one of Iron Man Morgan's slants for a home run down the center field bank. In the seventh, Wing scored on a triple sacrifice by Warren. In the eighth, Norway scored again on a sacrifice by Howe, a stolen base and sacrifice by Kilgore.

France, Norway's ace hurler, pitched to one hit up to the eighth inning when Robertson tied the rally with a hot single. Second followed by another by Hood. Scribner then tied the bases with a long fly. Bob Browne brought him in with a double. Wally Morgan and Stanley cleaned the plate with a two bagger. Young on by an error and Goddard on a neat single, stole third and ran and Robertson each brought in by sacrifice hits to make the eighth.

The NEW Firestone CENTURY PROGRESS TIRE

Ten Million People HELPED TO BUILD THE TIRE SENSATION of '34!

Beyond Comparison in Quality, Construction, Appearance and Price With Any First Quality Tire Made

THE way to create a TIRE SENSATION is to give the people what they want, and Firestone has done this with the new Firestone Century Progress Tire.

As millions of people visited the Firestone Factory at the World's Fair last year, we asked this question—"What do you value most in a tire?" They answered—"Give us Blowout Protection, Non-Skid Safety, and Long Wear at a moderate price."

This was a big order, but Firestone has a habit of giving car owners what they want when they want it.

We knew there was only one way to build Quality and Value into a tire at a moderate price, and that was by volume production. We built the greatest tire ever made to sell at these low prices. Car owners are profiting because we found out what they wanted and found the way to give it to them.

NEW REDUCED PRICES LIMITED TIME ONLY 4.40-21
Size	Old Price	New Price	You Save
4.40-21	$4.65	$5.75	0.93
4.50-20	7.05	6.10	0.96
4.50-21	7.51	6.30	1.01
4.75-19	7.78	6.70	1.08
5.00-19	8.14	7.20	1.14
5.25-18	9.27	8.00	1.27
5.25-21	10.20	8.80	1.40
5.50-17	10.11	8.75	1.40
5.50-18	10.15	9.05	1.40

Thenew Firestone Century Progress Tire IS EQUAL OR SUPERIOR to any first quality tire built, regardless of name, brand, by whom manufactured, or at what price offered for sale.

CHECK THESE AMAZING VALUES

Come in and equip your car with this marvel of tire construction, at the lowest price we have ever been able to make on a tire of this high quality and construction, carrying a Triple Guarantee

A BETTER SALESMAN

He strutted home one evening
And sought his faithful wife
To say: "My dear, we're fixed now
—I've just insured my life.
I've taken out one thousand,
So if I pass away
There'll be sufficient money
My funeral bills to pay."

"I see," said she, deep sighing,
And vainly tried to smile,
"The undertaker's safe now,
And that's one thing worth while.
But how about our Willie
And our dear baby, May?
How could I feed and clothe them
If death took you away?"

"I'd have to earn the living,
Which I could surely do,
But could not earn the living
And keep the children, too."
That set the chap to thinking—
It nearly knocked him prone!
He hastened to the hallway
And shouted in the phone.

"Hey, That you, Mr. Agent?
I'm Billy Jackass Jones.
Just change that application
To read twelve thousand bones—
Two thousand when I kick off,
And sixty-three each month."
The agent said: "All right, sir,"
Then fell down in a swoon.

WHEN MY MOTHER TUCKED ME IN

Woman's Life

Ah, the quaint and curious carying
On the posts of that old bed,
There were long-beaked, queer old griffins Wearing crowns upon their heads,
And they fiercely looked down on me

With a cold, sardonic grin;
I was not afraid of griffins
When my mother tucked me in.

I remember how it stood there,
With its head-piece backward rolled,
And its broad and heavy tester lined with platings, blue and gold,

And the great old-fashioned pillows Trimmed with ruffles, white and thin,

And the cover soft and downy
When my mother tucked me in.

What cared I for dismay shadows,
Shifting up and down the floor,
Of the bleak and gruesome wind gusts

Beating 'gainst the cased-shut door,
Or the rattling of the windows,
All the outside noise and din;
I was safe and warm and happy
When my mother tucked me in.

Sweet and soft her gentle fingers,
As they touched my sunburnt face;
Sweet to me the wafted odor
That enwrapped her dainty lace;

Then a pat or two at parting,
And a good-night kiss between;
All my troubles were forgotten
When my mother tucked me in.

Now the stricken years have borne
me
Far away from love and home,
Ah, no mother leans above me
In the nights that go and come,
But it gives me peace and comfort,
When my heart is sore within,
Just to lie right still, and, dreaming,

Think my mother tucked me in.

Oh, the gentle, gentle breathing
To her dear heart's softer beat,
And the quiet, quiet moving
Of her soft-shod little feet;
And Time, one boon I ask thee,
Whatsoever may be my sin,
When in dying, let me see her,
As she used to tuck me in.

SHORT CUTS IN HOUSEWORK MAY GIVE ADDED LEISURE

Summer months impose careful planning on the part of the homemaker if she is to have any leisure. With children home all day, summer guests and so on, short cuts in doing necessary work are in order. With this in mind Edna M. Cobb, home management specialist for the Extension Service suggests the following:

"Winter or summer the family must eat, but why not try simplifying the meals; cooking Sunday's dinner along with Saturday's serving a picnic meal now and then, even if it is eating no further away from the house than the nearest apple tree, saving the washing of dishes as well by using paper cups.

"Lessening the number of dust collecting places in the house makes housework easier. This may necessitate putting away some of the bric-a-brac for the summer. The house seems cooler without it, too. The more formal heavy hangings and coverings are either eliminated altogether during the summer months or replaced by those that are washable and of lighter weight. Washable slip covers placed over upholstered furniture give a change in color combinations and ease up on the weekly cleaning.

"Much time can be saved on the weekly ironing if one can bring herself to the point of thinking that the world will not come to an end if every sheet and every towel for daily use is not ironed. Scrupulously clean to be sure, but a few untorned articles and garments may give that desired hour of leisure. Children's summer clothes made from materials that require little or no ironing are most desirable."

WORMS IN POULTRY

By H. D. Munroe

Formerly Professor Poultry Extension Penn. State College

Next fall we will have the usual complaints about worm infested pullets. Most poultry raisers will want a remedy to take care of all the bad effects of worm infestation. It is a large order. In all animals and birds the damage done by worms is done during the growing period. It is possible to eliminate most of the worms in a pullet when she is eight or ten months of age but it is impossible to correct the damage done by these worms.

Prevention of worm infestations by clean range and keeping the young stock away from the hens is very important. In most flocks it will be impossible to completely prevent infestation. On farms where poultry has been raised for years or where there is a known worm infestation the pullet flock should be given at least two worm treatments during the growing period. Worming a pullet flock at ten weeks and again at the time they start to lay is good poultry management under average conditions.

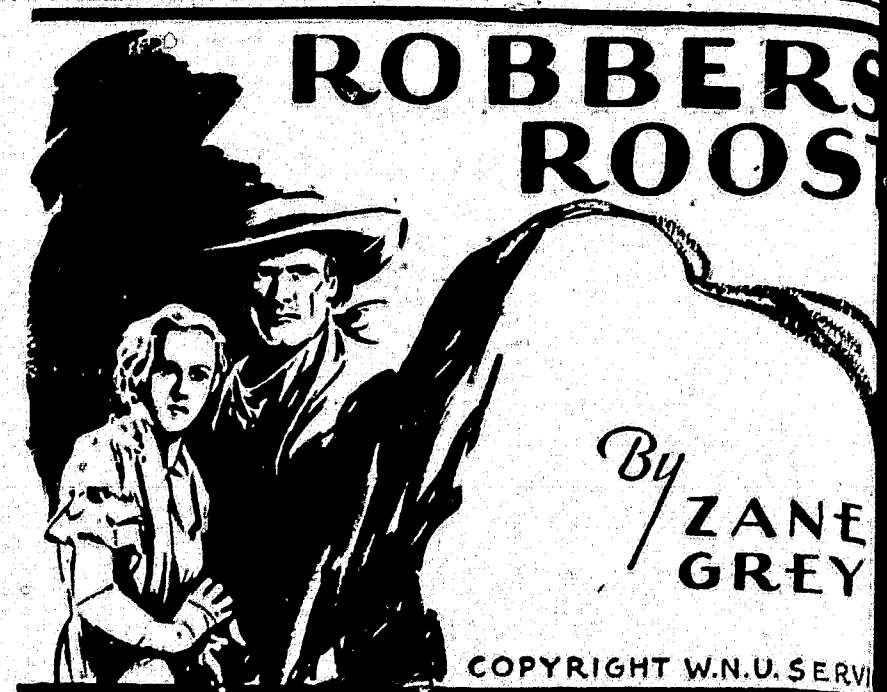

With the intensified conditions in poultry raising now practiced it is advisable to worm every flock of pullets raised this year at least once before they are put in winter quarters.

INCREASE IN VOLUME OF NEW INSURANCE

The greatest six-month volume of new paid-for business in five years was reported by The Union Central Life Insurance Company, of Cincinnati, at the close of June. Sales reports from agencies in more than three score cities of the United States showed a total of 395,130,118 new business written and settled for in the first half of 1934. This volume was more than double that recorded for the corresponding period of 1933.

This increased business was shared by the R. L. Sprague Portland Agency which more than doubled its business during this period. Walter E. Bartlett represents the Company here.

Estimates place the farm population at 32,509,000 on January 1, 1934, a new all-time peak.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Jim Wall, young cowboy from Wyoming, in the early days of the cattle industry, seeks a new field in Utah. He meets Hank Hays, who admits to being a robber, and tells Wall he is working for an Englishman named Herrick, who has located a big ranch in the mountains. Herrick has employed a small army of rustlers and gun-lighters, and Hays and others are plotting to steal their employer's cattle and money. Hays wants Wall to throw in with the rustlers.

CHAPTER II—At the little settlement of Green River, Hays gets into an argument with a gambler called Stud, over a poker game. Wall saves Hank's life by bluffing the gambler out of shooting. With Hays and two other rustlers, Happy Jack and Lincoln, Jim Wall starts out for Herrick's ranch. In camp, the first night out, Jim regrets the step he has taken, but it is too late to turn back.

CHAPTER III

NEXT morning they got a late start. Nevertheless Hays assured Jim that they would reach Star ranch towards evening. They rode on side by side. The trail led into a wider one, coming around from the northeast. Jim did not miss fresh hoof tracks, and Hays was not far behind in discovering them.

"Woods full of riders," he muttered. "How long have you been gone, Hays?" inquired Jim.

"From Star ranch? Let's see. Must be a couple of weeks. Too long, by gosh! Herrick sent me to Grand Junction. An' on the way back I circled. That's how I happened to make Green River."

"Did you expect to meet Happy Jack and Lincoln there?"

"Shore, An' some more of my outfit. But I guess you'll more'n make up for the other fellows."

"Hope I don't disappoint you," said Jim, dryly.

"Well, you haven't so far. Only I'd feel better, Jim, if you'd come clean with who you air an' what you air."

"Hays, I didn't ask you to take me on."

"Shore, you're right. Reckon I figured everybody knew Hank Hays. Why, there's a town down here named after me, Hankville."

"A town? No one would think it."

"Wal, it ain't much to brag on. A few cabins, the first of which I threw up with my father years ago. In his later years he was a prospector. We lived there for years. I trapped fur up here in the mountains. In fact I got to know the whole country except that Black Dragon canyon, an' that hellhole of the Dirty Devil. . . . My old man was shot by rustlers."

"I gathered you'd no use for rustlers. . . . Well, then, Hays, how'd you fall into your present line of business?"

where the pines straggled along the long, low cabin of logs, yellow in the sunlight, on the flat, extended the barns, sheds, corrals. What apart from both the new log cabin, hurriedly with chinks still unfilled, extended out on three sides like porches, where Wall observed three or four beds, a number of other riders' paraphernalia. The rear of the cabin against the rocks. Jim understood that Hays had thrown up a side, rather than dwell too close to the other employees of the ranch. From the front porch one dropped a stone into the brook for trout. The pines trooped along the edge of the brook.

There was a subtle intimation in this, probably not lost upon Slocum. The greatest gunmen were quiet, soft-spoken, sober, individuals who never sought quarrels. Jim knew that his reply would make an enemy, even if Slocum were not instinctively one on sight. Respect could scarcely be felt by men like Slocum. Like a weasel he sniffed around Jim.

"You don't, eh?" he queried. "Wal, you strike me unfavorable." "Smoky," said Hays, "I won't have no grudges in this outfit. I've got the biggest deal on I ever worked out. There's got to be harmony among us. But Smoky bobbin' up agin my new man—that's serious. Now let's lay the cards on the table. . . . Jim, do you want to declare yourself?"

"I'm willing to answer questions—unless they get nasty," replied Jim, frankly. "You got run out of Wyoming?" "No. But if I'd stayed on I'd probably stretched hemp."

"Hold up a stage or somebody?" "No. Once I helped hole up a bank. That was years ago."

"Bank robber! You're out of our class, Jim." "Hardly that. It was my first and only crack at a bank. Two of us got away. Then we held up a train—blew open the safe in the express car."

"Smoky, I call it square of these small ranches had gone to work for Herrick. He was told that Heeseeman, with ten men, was out on the range.

Presently Jim encountered Hays, accompanied by a tall, floridly blond man, garbed as no westerner had ever been. This, of course, must be the Englishman. He was young, hardly over thirty, and handsome in a fleshy way.

"Mr. Herrick, this is my new hand I was tellin' you about," announced Hays, glibly. "Jim Wall, late of Wyoming. . . . Jim, meet the boss."

"How do you do, Mr. Wall," returned Herrick. "I understand you've had wide experience on ranches?" "Yes, sir. I've been riding the range since I was a boy," replied Jim.

"Hays has suggested making you his foreman." "That is satisfactory to me." "You are better educated than these other men. It will be part of your duties to keep my books."

Jim Gleaned Information From This Rancher.

Wall," spoke up Hays. "He shore didn't need to come clean as that." "It's all right," agreed Slocum, as if forced to fair judgment. Hays plumped off the porch rail.

"Now, fellers, we can get to work. Herrick puts a lot of things up to me, an' I ain't no cattleman. Jim, do you know the cattle game?" "From A to Z," smiled Wall.

"Say, but I'm in luck. We'll run the ranch now."

"What'll I do, Hank?" asked Jim. "Wal, you look the whole ditz gin's over."

Jim lost no time in complying with his first order from the superior of Star ranch. What a monstrous and incredible hoax was being perpetrated upon some for elgner!

Jim passed cowboys with only a word or a nod. He talked with an old man who said he had owned a homestead across the valley, one of those Herrick had gathered in.

Jim gleaned information from this rancher. Herrick had bought out all the cattle men in the valley, and on round the foothill line to Limestone Springs, where the X Bar outfit began. Riders for these small ranches had gone to work for Herrick. He was told that Heeseeman, with ten men, was out on the range.

Presently Jim encountered Hays, accompanied by a tall, floridly blond man, garbed as no westerner had ever been. This, of course, must be the Englishman. He was young, hardly over thirty, and handsome in a fleshy way.

"Mr. Herrick, this is my new hand I was tellin' you about," announced Hays, glibly. "Jim Wall, late of Wyoming. . . . Jim, meet the boss."

"How do you do, Mr. Wall," returned Herrick. "I understand you've had wide experience on ranches?" "Yes, sir. I've been riding the range since I was a boy," replied Jim.

"I've tackled that job before." "So I was tellin' the boys," interposed Hays.

"As I understand ranching," went on Herrick, "a foreman handles the riders. Now, as this ranching game is strange to me I'm glad to have a foreman of experience. My idea was to hire some gunmen along with the cowboys. Hays' name was given me at Grand Junction as the hardest nut in eastern Utah. It got noised about, I presume, for other men with reputations calculated to intimidate thieves applied to me. I took on Heeseeman and his friends."

"But you really did not need go to the expense—and risk, I might add—of hiring Heeseeman's outfit?" "Expense is no object. Risk, however—what do you mean by risk?"

"Between ourselves, I strongly suspect that Heeseeman is a rustler." "By Jove! You don't say? This is ripping. Heeseeman said the identical thing about Hays."

"Wal, Mr. Herrick, don't you worry none," interposed Hays, suavely. "Shore I don't take kind to what Heeseeman called me to your face, but I can overlook it for the present. You see, if Heeseeman is workin' for you he can't rustle as many cattle as if he wasn't. Anythin' come of that deal you had on with the Grand Junction outfit?"

"Yes. I received their reply the other day," rejoined Herrick. "By Jove, that reminds me. I had word from my sister, Helen. It came from St. Louis. She is coming through Denver and will arrive at Grand Junction about the fifteenth."

"Young girl—if I may ask?" added Jim.

"Young woman. Helen is twenty-two." "Comin' for a little visit?" asked Hays.

"By Jove, it bids fair to be a life-long one," declared Herrick, as if pleased. "She wants to make Star ranch her home. We are devoted to each other. If she can stick it out in this bush I'll be jolly glad. Can you drive from Grand Junction in one day?"

"Shore. Easy with a buckboard an' a good team," replied Hays. Herrick resumed his walk with Hays, leaving Jim to his own devices.

Jim strolled around the corrals, the sheds, down the lane between the pastures, out to the open range.

This Englishman's sister—this Helen Herrick—she would be coming to a remote, wild and beautiful valley. What would the girl be like? Twenty-two years old, strong, a horsewoman, and handsome—very likely blond, as was her brother! And Jim made a mental calculation of the ruffians in Herrick's employ. Eighteen!

After supper Hays leaned back and surveyed the company. "Fellers, we've a pow-wow on hand. Clear the table. Fetch another lamp. We'll lay out the cards an' some coin, so we can pretend to be settin' in a little game if anybody happens along. But the game we're really settin' is the biggest ever dealt in Utah."

"Talk low, everybody," instructed Hays. "An' one of you step out on the porch now an' then. Heeseeman might be slyk enough to send a scout over here. 'Cause we're goin' to do that little thing to him. . . . Happy, dig up that box of cigars. I've been savin'."

"Hank, trot out some champagne," jeered Brad Lincoln.

"Nothin' to drink, fellers," returned Hays. "We're a robber outfit. No arguin' or fightin'. . . . Any of you who doesn't like that can walk-out now."

They were impressed by his cool force. "All right. Wal an' good. We're set," he went on. "Today I changed my mind about goin' slow with this job."

Jim Wall had a flash of divination as to this sudden right-about-face. "Herrick reckons there are upwards of ten thousand head of stock on the range. Some of these ranchers he bought out sold without a count. I bought half a dozen herds for Herrick. An' I underestimated say, rough calculatin', around two thousand head. So there's twelve thousand good. That's a herd, fellers. Air there any of you who wouldn't care to play a game for twelve thousand head of cattle at forty dollars per?"

There did not appear to be a single one. "Ahuu. Wal, thet's okay. Now, can we drive such a big herd?" "Boss, listen to this idee," spoke up Smoky. "Most of these Star cattle range down the valley twenty miles below here. How'd it do for, say, five of us to quit Herrick an' hide below somewhere? Meanwhile you go to Grand Junction an' arrange to have your buyers expect a bunch of cattle every week. A thousand to two thousand head. We'd make the drives an' keep it up as long as it worked. You're boss, an' Wal here is foreman. You could keep the cowboys close to the ranch."

"Smoky, it's shore a big idee," declared Hays, enthusiastically. "But what about Heeseeman?" "Let's clean out his bunch." Hays shook his head.

"Fellers, if we pick a fight with that outfit some of us will get killed an' others crippled. Then we couldn't pull the deal. A better idee is for one of us to kill Heeseeman."

"Reckon it would be. Thet'd bust the outfit." "Who'd you pick on to do that, Hank?"

Jeff Bridges boomed out: "Why, Smoky, of course, or Brad." "Nope," said Hays, shaking his head. "With all thet's due Smoky an' Brad I wouldn't choose either. Jim, here, is the man for that job."

"Mebbe we could drive off six or eight thousand head of stock before Heeseeman ever found out," put in Smoky. "What's the sense of fightin' it out till we have to?"

The suggestion found instant favor on all sides. "But we don't want Heeseeman trallin' us," expostulated Hays. "You mean after we pull the deal?" queried Brad, incredulously. "Shore I mean after. I don't just like the idee, fellers," replied Hays, evasively.

Jim Wall, studying the robber leader closely, imagined that Hays was not exposing all the details of his plot. "Let's put my idee to a vote," said Smoky.

When this suggestion was solemnly complied with, making use of the deck of cards, it was found that Slocum had won.

"So far, so good," said Hays, as if relieved. "Now let's see. . . . Smoky, tomorrow you take your gang, includin' Brad, an' quit. Pack a slew of grub an' grain, an' hide out below. Cache what you don't need. I'll go to Grand Junction for new hands. See? But all I'll come back with will be instructions for you to follow. Then you can go drivin'."

"Good. An' how about the cash?" "Wal, them buyers won't pay me in advance, you can gamble on that. But they'll pay you. Just divide with your outfit an' save our share."

"Short an' sweet. I like it more all the time," declared Smoky. Jim thought of something: "Men, has it occurred to you that you can't drive cattle up this road and through the ranch?"

"Shore. No need. It'd be a seventy-mile drive if we came this way. But we'll drive round by Limestone, an' up the other valley road. About the same distance to Grand."

The conference ended. Hays turned to the open fire, and seeking a seat in the shadow by the chimney, he pondered. It was Jim's opinion that the chief had vastly more on his mind than he had divulged. Lincoln gave him a suspicious stare. The others seemed eminently pleased with the outlook, though no more was said in Jim's hearing. They joked and smoked.

Jim bade them good night and went out. His last glimpse of Hays was thought-provoking. Lighting another cigar, Jim strolled up and down the porch, revolving in mind the conference.

Was it possible that this lantern-eyed robber had evil intentions toward Herrick's sister? Jim scouted the suspicion.

"Hang the girl part of it, anyhow," he muttered, flinging his half-smoked cigar into the noisy brook. Why did a woman have to come along to upset the best-laid plans of men?

The next morning brought somber faces and action. Five of Hays' outfit rode away with six of the pack horses and most of the supplies. Hays watched them until they disappeared among the cedars. "Wal, now I'll brace the boss," he said.

"What excuse will you give him?" asked Jim. "Anythin' would do to tell Herrick. But Heeseeman will see through me, I'm afeared."

"Very well. You tell Herrick that your outfit split over me. Tell him how queer that brand of gunman is—how he instinctively hates the seat gunman. An' that Slocum and Lincoln made you choose between them and me."

"Ahuu. Sort of so the idee will get to Heeseeman's ears that in a pinch with guns I'd rather have you backin' me than them?" "Exactly."

Not long afterward Hays returned to the cabin jubilant. "You'd never guess. Jim. That Englisher laughed like the very devil. An' he ordered me to ride off after some desperadoes who're not afraid of Jim Wall."

"Ha! Ha! But Heeseeman won't get a laugh out of it." "Shoot the lights out of him," said Hays fiercely. "Wal, I'm off for Grand. Happy, pack me a sack of grub."

"How long will it take you to ride over?" "Eight hours, I reckon. An' I'll be back tomorrow night."

After Hays had gone Jim settled himself to pass the hours away. He half expected a visit from Herrick, but the morning dragged by without any sign of anyone. About mid-afternoon, however, six riders appeared coming down the lane along the bench. The sight made Jim start. How often had he seen the like—a compact little company of riders, dark-garbed, riding dark horses! It was tremendously suggestive to a man of his experience.

He reached inside the door and, drawing out his rifle, advanced to the front of the porch.
